Manually authenticate user laravel. Manually authenticating users laravel 8.

Configuration Laravel aims to make implementing authentication very simple. In fact, almost everything is configured for you out of the box. The authentication configuration file is located at app/config/auth.php, which contains several well documented options for tweaking the behavior of the authentication facilities. By default, Laravel includes a User model in your app/models directory which may be used with the default Eloquent authentication driver. Please remember when building the Schema for this Model to ensure that the password field is a minimum of 60 characters. If your application is not using Eloquent, you may use the database authentication driver which uses the Laravel query builder. Note: Before getting started, make sure that your users (or equivalent) table contains a nullable, string remember_token column of 100 characters. This column will be used to store a token for "remember me" sessions being maintained by your application. This can be done by using Stable->rememberToken(); in a migration. Storing Passwords The Laravel Hash class provides secure Bcrypt hashing: Hashing A Password Using Bcrypt $password = Hash::make('secret'); Verifying A Password Against A Hash if (Hash::check('secret', $hashedPassword)) // The passwords match... Checking If A Password Needs To Be Refreshed if (Hash::needsRehash($hashed)) $hashed = Hash::make('secret'); Authenticating Users To log a user into your application, you may use the Auth::attempt method. if (Auth::attempt(array('email' => $email, 'password' => $password))) return Redirect::intended('dashboard'); Take note that email is not a required option, it is merely used for example. You should use whatever column name corresponds to a "username" in your database. The Redirect::intended function will redirect the user to the URL they were trying to access before being caught by the authentication filter. A fallback URI may be given to this method in case the intended destination is not available. When the attempt method is called, the auth.attempt event will be fired. If the authentication attempt is successful and the user is logged in, the auth.login event will be fired as well. Determining If A User Is Authenticated To determine if the user is already logged into your application, you may use the check method: // The user is logged in... Authenticating A User And "Remembering" Them If you would like to provide "remember me" functionality in your application, you may pass true as the second argument to the attempt method, which will keep the user authenticated indefinitely (or until they manually logout). Of course, your users table must include the string remember_token column, which will be used to store the "remember me" token. if (Auth::attempt(array('email' => $email, 'password' => $password), true)) // The user is being remembered... Note: If the attempt method returns true, the user is considered logged into the application. Determining If User Authed Via Remember If you are "remembering" user logins, you may use the viaRemember method to determine if the user was authenticated using the "remember me" cookie: Authenticating A User With Conditions you also may add extra conditions to the authenticating query: if (Auth::attempt(array('email' => $email, 'password' => $password, 'active' => 1))) // The user is active, not suspended, and exists. Note: For added protection against session fixation, the user's session ID will automatically be regenerated after authenticating. Accessing The Logged In User Once a user is authenticated, you may access the User model / record: $email = Auth::user()->email; To retrieve the authenticated user's ID, you may use the id method: To simply log a user into the application by their ID, use the loginUsingId method: Validating User Credentials Without Login The validate method allows you to validate a user's credentials without actually logging them into the application: if (Auth::validate($credentials)) Logging A User In For A Single Request You may also use the once method to log a user into the application for a single request. No sessions or cookies will be utilized. if (Auth::once($credentials)) Logging A User Out Of The Application Manually Logging In Users If you need to log an existing user instance into your application, you may simply call the login method with the instance: This is equivalent to logging in a user via credentials using the attempt method. Protecting Routes Route filters may be used to allow only authenticated users to access a given route. Laravel provides the auth filter by default, and it is defined in app/filters.php. Protecting A Route Route::get('profile', array('before' => 'auth', function() // Only authenticated users may enter... CSRF Protection Laravel provides an easy method of protecting your application from cross-site request forgeries. Inserting CSRF Token Into Form
